“ I first met Big D as we called him the night my house was burning down across the street. Him and Tori opened their home to us that night. Since then we have been like family. There was a lot of laughing going on at their dining room table. I'm thankful to Darrell for taking my children under his wings, treating them like a father. Especially teaching Thomas all about cars. He was big in stature, but always protected my family. It was comforting to know I had a teddy bear of a friend living across the street. Darrell will forever be remembered by his “sugar mama”
