“ I have a lot of memories of Pudgy. Being a young mother to my oldest son(Jeremy), I was around 20 maybe 21. He and my sister watched Jeremy a lot, I worked and did my own thing (which I'm not proud of) but I went out after work one night with some friends and ended up there to picked Jeremy up, and Pudgy knew I had been drinking and he told me hell no you're not taking Jeremy out of this house. He would not let me in the house it was late, I admired him for this. I didn't say anything other than well can I stay here and he threw me a pillow on the porch and that is where I slept. He loved his family and had a big heart .. he just didn't want you to know it.
RIP Pudgy
